At this point the calendar should show up on your Android phone's calendar. It may take a minute or two to update. If not, check to make sure calendar is shown on Android phone and selected. Here's how:

Click your menu or options hard key on your phone

Then click the settings key

Then click on calendars

Make sure your new calendar is listed here and selected. If it is not listed, then you may need to clear the application memory for your calendar and reload it. I don't have a procedure to help you with that so you may need to google it.

Android Notes:

*Calendar will automatically update when events are added/removed/changed on the Rosemount website

*These events are READ ONLY events on your Android phone – meaning you can't change or delete an event. The only one who can change or delete is the person who manages the calendar on the Rosemount website.

*Calendar can be removed from your phone by deleting it from your google calendar account.

iPhone Notes:

Procedure is the same for an iPhone with the following exceptions...

*You may need to create a gmail account.

*You will need to browse to <http://calendar.google.com> on your iPhone and sign into your google account you created. Calendar will then show up after you login. You can then save this as a shortcut on your iPhone and view it anytime you have a data connection.
